Reaching Out to the Community

Active community outreach is a high priority for DPD. Outreach efforts include public workshops and meetings regarding long-range planning issues like the Central Waterfront, Comprehensive Plan, South Lake Union, and the monorail and light rail. DPD also offers a home improvement workshop series, disaster preparedness seminars, landslide forums, stakeholder meetings, and a monthly newsletter—dpdINFO.

Providing Access to Information

Staff in DPD's Public Resource Center (PRC) play a key role in allowing the citizens of Seattle an opportunity to comment on proposed land use actions. Staff post signs at sites of proposed development throughout the city and publish the Land Use Information Bulletin twice weekly. The PRC also provides walk-in customers with centralized access to all DPD publications, historical property records on microfilm, GIS maps, Master Use Permit information, the City's Sustainable Building Library, and free access to the City website on self-help computers.

Seattle's Department of Planning and Development

DPD develops, administers and enforces standards for land use, design, construction and housing within the city limits.

DPD is also responsible for long-range planning, including Seattle's Comprehensive Plan and related projects—transportation improvements, neighborhood business revitalization, downtown and waterfront planning, and more.

Overview

DPD’s work affects many aspects of the city. From the structural elements of a house, to the design of new buildings, to the parking spaces available at an apartment building, to the future of the Central Waterfront, DPD planners, reviewers and inspectors are working every day to protect and enhance Seattle’s natural and built environment.

DPD services are provided by a staff of 360, comprised of professional engineers, architects, urban and land use planners, inspectors with experience in the construction-related trades, code development analysts, code compliance inspectors, and specialists in sustainable building and the permit process.

The department develops policies and codes related to environmental protection, development, housing and community standards, including:

- Seattle Land Use Code
- State Environmental Policy Act
- Seattle Shoreline Master Plan
- Environmental Critical Areas Ordinance
- Seattle Building Code
- Seattle Mechanical Code
- Seattle Energy Code
- Stormwater, Grading and Drainage Control Ordinance
- Housing & Building Maintenance Code
- Seattle Noise Ordinance

Planning a Better Seattle

In June 2002, a number of long-range physical planning functions were added to DPD’s mission, including the Seattle Planning Commission. DPD is now responsible for monitoring and updating the City’s Comprehensive Plan; evaluating regional growth management policy; developing sub-area and functional plans; preparing urban design plans; developing land use policy; establishing green building as the industry standard; and staffing the Seattle Planning Commission and the Seattle Design Commission.

Permitting & Inspecting

Each year, DPD approves over 27,000 land use and construction-related permits and performs 80,000 on-site inspections. Our reviewers analyze development projects based on Seattle’s land use, construction and environmental regulations. Our team of over 50 construction inspectors visits all single family, multifamily, commercial and industrial construction sites within the city, ensuring compliance with building, energy, mechanical, environmental, drainage, erosion control, side sewer, electrical, elevator, boiler, refrigeration, sign and housing/zoning standards.

Stats at a glance

- Each year, DPD issues over 27,000 permits—approximately 700 Master Use Permits, 7,000 building permits, and over 20,000 other construction-related permits.
- The total project value of issued permits has exceeded $1 billion each year since 1998.
- Each year, DPD housing and zoning inspectors respond to over 4,600 complaints pertaining to minimum housing standards, land use violations, shorelines, tenant relocation assistance, just cause eviction, and vacant and unfit buildings.

Code Compliance

- Housing and Zoning Enforcement
- Construction Enforcement
- Property Owner/Tenant Assistance
- Enforcement Facilitation

Enforcing Seattle’s Codes

Each year, DPD housing and zoning inspectors respond to over 4,600 complaints pertaining to minimum housing standards, land use violations, shorelines, tenant relocation assistance, just cause eviction, vacant buildings and noise control. Examples of violations include illegal uses, junk storage, noxious weed growth, vacant buildings and construction noise. DPD’s Enforcement Facilitation group provides legal support for obtaining code compliance.
